Meet Our Teachers:

Rebecca Henry,
Camp Director

Rebecca has always loved to sing and music has always been a huge part of her life. When she was little, she would collect all of the freestanding lights from around the house to use as her stage lights for her first stage, the raised hearth in the living room. Her productions would also include makeup, costumes, music, and occasionally, scenery made from recycled refrigerator boxes. Needless to say, she's loved the stage ever since. The stages Rebecca performs on have grown in size since those first performances (including Kennedy Center, Strathmore, Winspeare Opera House) but she always works to channel the pure love she had for music that she found on her first stage.

She believes that music should be fun and full of joy, taking on the philosophy that if a student is engaged and passionate about music, they will continue to pursue it. Her goal is to help her students find and foster their passion and dedication for music. Together, Rebecca and her students take big tasks and break them down into manageable pieces, helping each student to learn how to problem solve and manage large tasks.

When she's not teaching she can be seen on the podium conducting orchestras and on stage singing in operas. She's sung all over the world and has been featured in televised productions while singing in the US, China, and Italy. She loves to scuba dive, practice yoga, and explore the outdoors.

Rebecca received her Masters of Music from McGill University and her Bachelors of Music from Rice University.

I love teaching, performing, and sharing the joy of music with others. Teaching music has always been a passion of mine. Whether it's with my youngest students, using percussion instruments to teach rhythm or with my older students discussing more complex musical concepts, I find joy in teaching. I take an active approach to my teaching making sure that the student is always engaged, bringing different teaching tools each week to teach a wide range of concepts. Through this approach, I'm able to teach a broad range of instruments (voice/singing, cello, piano, violin, and ukulele) in a variety of styles including Broadway, Classical, and Pop.

Teaching has always been a part of my life. From an early age, I observed the piano lessons that both my mother and grandmother taught. (I'm a third generation music teacher in my family.) They showed me the ropes, giving me a solid teaching foundation. From that foundation I built my own individual style of teaching and am always finding new ways to keep my lessons unique and fun. I truly enjoy working with both parents and children, and I love teaching music! When I'm not teaching you can find singing and playing around the nation's capital. Previous performances include Aida and Eugene Onegin with the Washington National Opera, Mikado with Victoria Lyric Opera, and weekly performances with New York Avenue Presbyterian. I have my Masters of Music from George Mason University in Vocal Performance and my Bachelors of Music from Utah State in Vocal and Cello Performance.
